

Update

Camelthorn Brewing Company is beginning to take shape with the 3 month construction period going into its second month this week.

The brewing equipment has been ordered in Germany and is being manufactured. The brewmaster has been appointed and will join the team April 1st to be sent to Germany for training in the art of Bavarian "Weissbier"

Brewing equipment is expected to arrive as of the end of April 2009

Equipment

Photos taken during my visit to the "Brau Beviiale" (Beer trade show in Nürnberg in Germany in November 2008 of some of the equipment that has been purchased.

Steam Boiler

This will be the view from the bar area – our system is slightly smaller and lower and there will be a glass window to separate the brewhouse from the tap-room.

This is Christian Nuber sales engineer from BrauKon the manufacturer of our brewing system.

Michael Plank

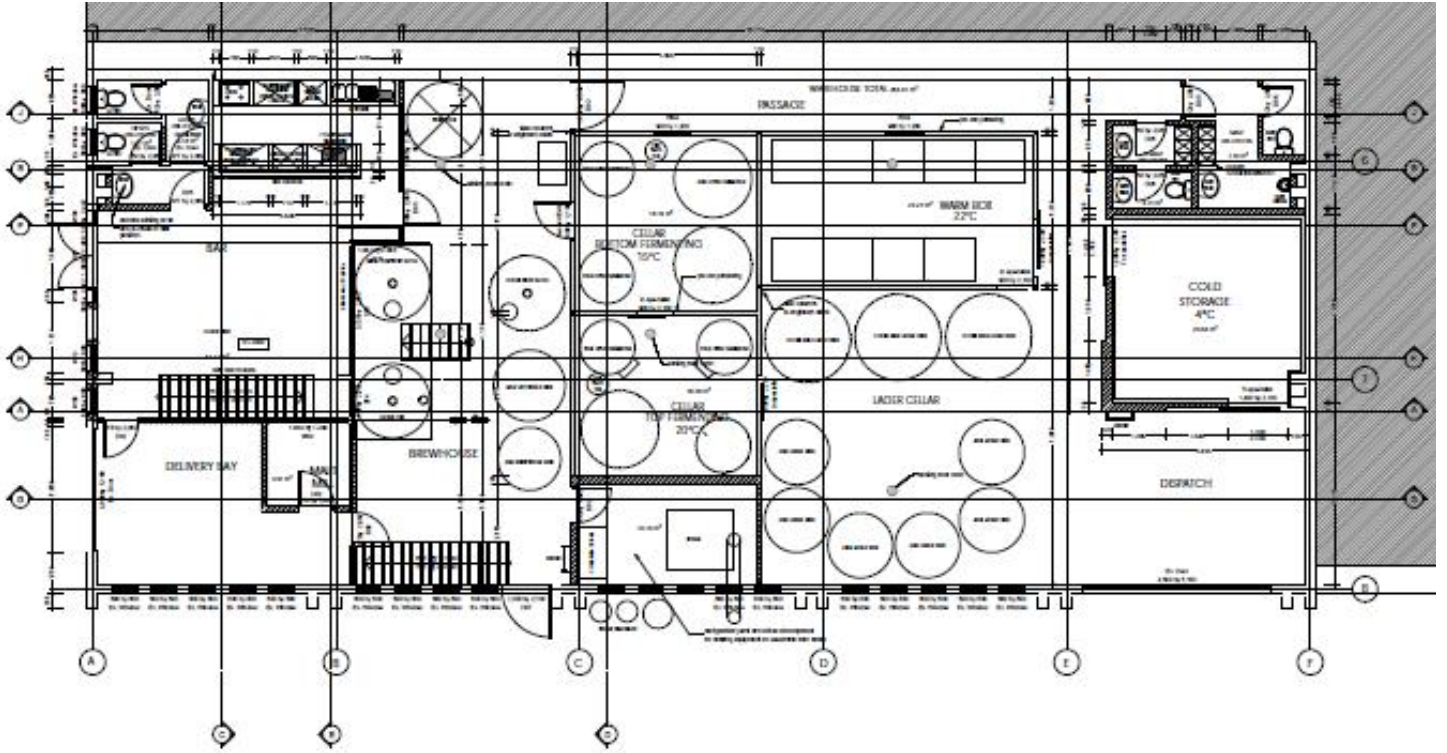

<http://www.brauerei-plank.de/index-Dateien/Page301.htm> (attached in email) on the left - our consulting Weissbier brewmaster holding on to the 10 liter Kegs we will be using (keg is cut open to understand the design: Top chamber is the CO₂ chamber – bottom is the beer chamber, in the middle the filling tube and behind it that fitting for the tap to tap beer). Michael has in the meantime filled a test beer into one of these kegs to test the Keg fermentation procedure. As far as we know this has not been practiced before in this type of keg. We look forward to the results and a video within the next 10 days.

Again, this is the feel we shall be creating in our tap room – the brewing system behind a glass façade behind the visitor, primarily around standing tables.
